Class News

It felt a little like spring was on its way when I was out on break duty this week – hopefully that is a good sign for our upcoming residential! Thank you to all those parents who managed to make it to the information meeting this week. Don't worry if you couldn't come, as we will be emailing out notes and the kit list in due course.

The theme of Antarctica continues in English. We have learnt about the qualities required of men undertaking the expedition and what such a trip can offer them. As it took place in 1914, the children have learnt how to use the 'subjunctive form' to make their writing more formal too. We are well on the way to creating our very own advertisements.

We are beginning to join the dots in Maths where the children have learnt about percentages and then converted between them, decimals and fractions. This is quite a tricky skill and we have been impressed with the flexibility they have shown in their reasoning.

The yeast investigation is well underway with four bottles on the window ledge as I type this. One is well in the lead – I wonder if your child can explain which they think it will be and why?

Having thought about why God chose Moses, we have learnt about the Passover Meal and the Seder Plate this week. Linking this to their own lives, the children created their own plates with foods that reminded them of significant moments – many of which were deeply thoughtful.
