This Week...

Well, what a week!! It has felt like a week of uncertainty with the outcome being one that creates more upheaval for a lot of people.

I have been out of school for most of the week and so Year 1 have been split into their afternoon classes. My colleagues have done a fantastic job providing work and looking after all those who have been left in school. It has been very tricky for them with the rapidly decreasing number of staff and fluctuating number of pupils. So I'd like to say a big thank you to them.

Just to Let You Know....

My husband and I are expecting a baby and it will be due in late August! I haven't had opportunity to tell the children yet so feel free to share the news on our behalf.

Home Learning...

Packs have been sent home for each child along with a number of reading books.

On the website you will be able to find a learning plan for Year 1. This consists of a 'Tic Tac Toe' grid of extended activities then below there is a list of websites that the children can access. Repetition is key in Year 1 so although the tasks seem simple, repetition can build understanding.

Although I will not be directly teaching your children I am still here and more than happy to support in any way I can (from isolation!) My work e-mail address is Finally....

Although you and your children are out of sight, you are all very much still in mind. I hope to see you all soon and I am very much praying that you are safe and well and that you are able to tackle the challenges that this current situation brings.
